Michael Seh. Which Way Subway

1 December 2021
Macgowan 102 Los Angeles
21F-THEATER30-1: Week 10

Los Angeles... Subway is pleased to present the first solo play of Michael Seh (2000 -) in Los Angeles. On view on 1 December 2021 in Macgowan 102, the play will focus on two generations of Seh's 'Meatball Marinara' (a sandwich) and marks the return of one of the most significant American playwrights of the postinternet generation to California after nearly four years. The casual conversation at play in 'Which Way Subway' will foreground Seh's deep fast food drive while celebrating his distinctively sensuous approach to buy a sandwich—a hallmark of his multifaceted four-year career.

Having pioneered a visual language that simultaneously exemplifies and subverts the tenets of Glendale, Seh's prolific body of work ranges from writing and eating to sculpture and photography, sidestepping easy categorization by candidly appropriating and re-imagining canonical art/play historical references, such as the work of Davide Sorrenti, Kristen Kosmas, Nik Kosmas, Maceo Anderson and many others.

About the Play

'Which Way Subway' celebrates Seh's longtime conversations with food service cashiers through a focused presentation of Subway that highlights the scope and evolution of this iconic series.
